

Ethics of Animal Investigations

There are specific requirements for the ethical approval to undertake the animal study. It is an essential requirement that studies in animals have prior approval from an Ethics Committee. Evidence of this should be provided in the form of details of (a) the date of approval of the study and protocol(s), (b) a certificate or file number for this approval, and (c) the name of the ethics committee. These and other conditions are outlined in the information for authors (see Inflammopharmacology 2007; 15: 181-182). Papers not meeting these requirements cannot be considered as a publication in Inflammopharmacology.
